

ANOMALOUS PHENOMENA RESEARCH CENTER

305 West End Avenue, Ste. 1401

New York, NY 10023

874-6433 / aimich@juno.com

May 15, 2000

Mr. Miroslaw Magola
Gelbhofstr. 24
81375 München
Germany

Dear Mirek:

We are pleased to announce the formation of the Anomalous Phenomena Research Center (APRC). The goal of the APRC is to contribute to a mindshift that allows mainstream science to recognize parapsychology as a science of utmost importance. Parapsychology involves the study of a group of phenomena that is comprised of Extra-Sensory Perception (ESP), mental phenomena and psychokinesis (PK), the capacity to influence physical reality by mental processes alone. Physical sciences today are in the forefront of the sciences. Because macro-PK involves occurrences detectable and measurable by physical means, it is of special significance to the community of physicists.

In the research sector of APRC's activities, special attention will be given to the experimental study of individuals producing macro-PK-type phenomena, as well as PK phenomena having no discernible connection with human beings. Because two parapsychological laboratories have been closed as a consequence of the activity of debunkers, contemporary Psi research is limited to ESP and micro-PK, both less controversial. However, without the study of macro-PK, the science of parapsychology will not be complete. In addition, research on macro-PK tends to have more value for convincing mainstream scientists of the importance of this field.

Recent publications, using such concepts as nonlocality and phase-conjugate-adaptive-resonance (PCAR) among others, begin to build a groundwork for a better understanding of anomalous events. Based on new research, and the APRC's own projects, we hope to develop a resolution to inadequate funding for PSI research.

An important project of the Center is a series of three crucial demonstrations. In the first event, PK and ESP phenomena will be demonstrated to a small group of scientists. The intent is to begin to develop cooperation with mainstream science. In the second event, a demonstration will be performed at a well-known university to a larger group of scientists. The results will be published in a refereed journal. In the third event, PK and ESP phenomena will be demonstrated to a jury of Nobel Prize winners at an international event. There will be full coverage of this event by the electronic and print media. This crucial demonstration will become an event that should gain worldwide publicity and lead to the long-contested recognition of the veracity of paranormal phenomena which will result in necessary funding for PSI research.

Another project of the APRC is the organization of a group of "clairvoyant viewers" whose task will be finding solutions to major problems in science, medicine and other fields of human endeavor.

The importance of parapsychological research stretches across the broad spectrum of life on our planet. Parapsychological research will lead to breakthroughs in orthodox and alternative medicine; to finding solutions to scientific, social, cultural and other problems; and to the prediction of natural disasters and future events. It will yield scientific support for the veracity of religious "miracles" and bring the all-important solution to humanity's perennial question, that no other science has on its research program, "Is there life after the death of the body?"

We would be happy to have your thoughts and suggestions. In addition, if you know of any psychics producing macro-PK phenomena, we would appreciate it if you would let us know.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "A Imich".

Alexander Imich, PhD
President, APRC